Worldwide, religious tensions, extremism, and fear increasingly influence our human experience. But amid all the conflicts, there are unknown people who battle this phenomenon.

Join Joyce Dubensky, Tanenbaum CEO, and Tanenbaum's peacemaker Rev. Bill Lowrey, who worked in South Sudan, for a conversation on religion, peace, and the people on the ground who never quit. The book will be available for sale.

Joyce S. Dubensky, Esq. is the CEO of Tanenbaum, a secular, non-sectarian non-profit that works to dismantle religious violence and hatred.

Rev. Bill Lowrey is the former director of peacebuilding and reconciliation for World Vision International and an American affiliated with the Presbyterian Church and the New Sudan Council of Churches. For over a decade, during the civil war, he worked at the local level in South Sudan to reconcile opposing tribes.
