Building Confidence for Teaching About Religion

Using Judaism as a Case Study

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19 | 6:00 – 8:00 PM EST | VIRTUAL

Combining the expertise of the Tanenbaum and the Institute for Curriculum Services (ICS), this interactive workshop equips educators to navigate religious identity in the classroom with confidence.

Learn to bridge how to talk about religion with what to teach, using teaching about Judaism as a practical case study for religious inclusivity.

You will:

- Explore inclusive pedagogical practices
- Learn how to elevate respectful curiosity, especially during complicated conversations
- Leave with a toolkit filled to foster nuanced religious literacy across any curriculum
